"Our exports and importamust cease e privateers ander the Spanish flog will Maweep our vessels from the ocean. Our cotn product, and all our staples for export, which cannot be consumed at home, will rot on our heads. Our Mediterrances commerce will be at the mercy of Spanish cruisers, issuing from every Spanish port or that sea. "Cuba and Porto Rico will afford nests for Spanish privateers and pirates; but we can rid ourselves easily of that nuisance by taking Cuba and Porte Rico at once. We can do that as easily as the French and British have taken Sepastopol and Cronstadt, and of Jourse without more expense of life or treasure. The British and French Allies of Spain are not of any practical account, and it is not necessary, therefore, to make provision for them, probably. In fact we must, as the Ostend bombast has it, go into the war without regard to cost. Granting, then, that we may take Cubs and Porto Rico at a hop, skip, and a jump, we will have nothing then to do but to seize old Spain, and perhaps the peninsula will be a more easy conquest than the island.

"It would hardly require much activity the part of privatectimen and r the Span's flag to drive our commerce ir in the ocean, because that w uld soon be effectually done by the enhanced rate of insurance on American vessels, which would throw our trade into foreign ports.
